ORSA Cowboys Honor Marshal Andy

A proud Marshal Andy

On September 17, 2023, at the East Tennessee PBS Tribute to Marshal Andy Smalls, the ORSA Cowboys (aka Oak Ridge Outlaws) presented "The Knoxville Cowboy" with his very own Oak Ridge Outlaws badge. "It's just like the one Marshal Dillion wore on Gunsmoke!" Marshal Andy exclaimed.

Marshal Andy and the Riders of the Silver Screen began airing on East Tennessee PBS in 1990, for some 33 years hosting music and film legends, singing songs with his band, sharing films from old Westerns every Saturday morning. He also held annual fund raising shows and was especially proud to have the ORSA Cowboys support during those events.

As Wayne Bledsoe of the Knoxville News Sentinel said once, "Andy Smalls didn't grow up to be a real cowboy. He grew up to be something better. Andy grew up to be what all of us who watched western movies believed cowboys really were. He's honest. He's a faithful friend. He'll tell you a joke to your face, but won't laugh at you behind your back. He's easy with a smile, and he lives by a code. And when he walks into a room, you know things are going to get just a little bit better."

As all of you now know, Hamas attacked Israel on Saturday 7 October. This was arguably the most barbaric attack since the days of the Huns. Israelis were slaughtered at a music festival, gangs of barbarians roamed through towns along the border with Gaza shooting whoever they saw, including small children, babies, and whole families. Another aim of the barbarians was to take hostages, especially women, young and old.

What struck me as I watched the videos and read the reports was that the barbarians faced no opposition. I had always been under the impression that armed citizens were the norm in Israel. Boy was I wrong.

After some research I was amazed to find that unlike in the U.S., Israeli citizens do not have the right to bear arms. Israel, a tiny democracy in the Middle East with terrorists along all its borders, has more stringent gun-control laws than anywhere in America.

Although you see firearms all over Israel because of mandatory military service, Israel's government strictly regulates private ownership. Recent figures published by the National Security Ministry indicate that barely 150,000 Israelis have a personal gun license, or some 2.6% percent of the entire adult population (15-64). This figure excludes weapons held by IDF soldiers, police officers, border guards, and other security personnel — as well as approximately 400,000 illegal firearms, the vast majority circulating in Arab communities. Civilians can only apply for a pistol, and rifles are wholly off-limits. Furthermore, as a general rule, civilians can have no more than 50 bullets in their possession at any given time.

So, the politicians in Israel knowing full well that they are surrounded by countries that have vowed to erase Israel and its people from the face of the earth, and they decide that the people cannot have a means to defend themselves and their families. The barbarians knew they could kill, rape, behead, and kidnap these people with no one to stop them.

On the Tuesday after the attack Israel's National Security Minister Itamar Ben-Gvir tweeted the following, translated into English, "Today I directed the Firearms Licensing Division to go on an emergency operation, to allow as many citizens as possible to arm themselves."

Itamar Ben-Gvir was announcing the procurement of 10,000 rifles for civilian security teams.

"We will turn the world upside down so that towns are protected. I have given instructions for massively arming the civilian security teams," Ben-Gvir passionately stated.

The rifles, as reported, are earmarked for distribution in towns situated close to borders, mixed Jewish-Arab cities, and West Bank settlements. This initiative is seen as a response to escalating security threats, particularly in light of events such as the recent Hamas invasion. However, it's worth noting that 4,000 of these assault rifles have already been secured from an Israeli manufacturer and are poised for immediate distribution. In addition to rifles, helmets, and bulletproof vests have also been acquired, further emphasizing the government's commitment to civilian safety.

Back in the U.S.A.

The Left in America thinks you are stupid. The Left in America wants the citizens to be ignorant; see the current state of our education system where they teach that a man can become a woman and vice versa and where a man can be pregnant. The Left doesn't want the citizenry to understand the amazing history of America or to understand liberty and freedom envisioned by our Founding Fathers in the Declaration of Independence and the U.S. Constitution. The Left doesn't want the citizenry to understand that the rights guaranteed in the Bill of Rights are God-given rights, NOT rights granted by the government. The Left doesn't want the citizenry to understand that the Constitution was created to protect "we the people" FROM the tyranny of government.

You have a God-given right of self-defense and defense of your family and your home. The Founders recognized this when they wrote the Second Amendment which ended with "shall not be infringed." But over the years the Second Amendment has become the most regulated of all the rights guaranteed in the Bill of Rights. The sad truth is the "We the People" allowed this to happen. Our elected representatives in the state government have allowed this to happen. Our elected representatives to Congress have allowed this to happen. What are we to do as the attacks on our freedom and liberty have become an almost daily onslaught?

The first step is to be informed. Learn the history of America's founding and the principals behind the Declaration of Independence and the Constitution. Once informed you can form your own opinions and be able to articulate them to others.

Next, and maybe most importantly, speak out. We must stop being "the silent majority." We must be loud and proud of being lucky enough to be born in America, an America that was uniquely founded based on individual liberty and freedom with a government to serve the people. The path of least resistance is to put your head down and ignore what is going on and hope you are the last person eaten by the alligator that is our government. Become an activist for saving our country and defending our rights. Be aware that "they" are coming for you but be resolute in your convictions. Let your elected representatives know that we are holding them accountable - and vote.

I said that "they" are coming for you and that is the cold reality. Why is it that every gun control law we have on the books only affects the lawful citizen? Why is it that after every mass shooting the politicians propose a new gun law because "we have to do something," but the law only affects the law-abiding citizen. Why is it that as crime is spiraling out of control the politicians turn a blind eye towards the criminals while persecuting those who dare to defend themselves or their fellow citizens?

All this must stop. Don't be afraid. Don't be afraid to stand up for our rights and speak out against those who are a threat to those rights. Don't be afraid that the government or social media will do everything in their power to silence you. One right that is the hallmark of our constitutional republic is free speech. America's free speech principles have been the envy of any freedom and liberty seeking people in the world. We are the only country in the world that guarantees free speech. Never could I have seen our own government working with social media companies to censure citizens. If the government now thinks that it can take away the free speech of tens of millions of citizens, what's next? We are at a point in our history where the friction between the government and the people is causing a fray in the fabric of our republic.

The Bill of Rights was ratified in December of 1791. It was demanded by the anti-federalists as a check on the powers of the new federal government. It enhanced the existing checks and balances of the Constitution. The people who demanded the Bill of Rights were not those who created the Constitution. They were those who warned of the centralization of power in the Federal government. The Bill of Rights was proposed by the anti-federalists and enthusiastically passed by the states with the overwhelming support of the people. It was not those who proposed and wrote the Constitution who demanded, passed, and ratified the Bill of Rights, including the Second Amendment. It was those who were leery of centralized power who demanded more restraints on the power of the new government.

The political theories the Constitution is based on are those of Natural law and Natural rights, theories the founders avidly agreed with and supported.

The Second Amendment is a direct product of the theory of Natural Law, which holds no one, including the government, has the right to take a person's life or property without due process. Because evil exists in the world, and many are willing to illegitimately take life or property, or to destroy communities, the means to defend your life, property, or community is protected. The right to life fundamentally includes the right to effective means to defend your life. The American revolutionaries understood the flaw in the English Bill of Rights, as put forward by Sir William Blackstone. When they created their distinctly American version of the right to arms, they made it far more powerful and restrictive than the English law which had failed them.

The Constitution itself belies the idea the founders would not have included a means to defend against a government that might become tyrannical. The checks and balances in the Constitution are a basic defense against such tyranny. There is no contradiction in including the protection of another basic defense. The right of the people to keep and bear arms is not created by the Constitution, it is protected by it as an additional defense against a government which may become tyrannical. The founders were aware of the history of governments accumulating power to themselves and turning against the people.

Remember the Second Amendment is the ultimate guarantor of the First Amendment and all the other rights in the Bill of Rights. Don't be afraid to speak out, defend yourself and your family. We must be confident that there are enough patriots out there that think like us.

While making repeated pleas for more gun control, Joe Biden loves to crack jokes about law-abiding gun owners and their "need" for 50, 60, or 100 rounds of ammunition. He did it again from The White House Rose Garden while announcing the creation of his new federal gun control office.

"I'll say it again... It's time again to ban assault weapons and high-capacity magazines," the president remarked. "If you need 80 shots in a magazine, you shouldn't own a gun."

Pres. Biden's New Federal Office Of Gun Control Reeks Of Hypocrisy

Gun control activists who have been angered by President Joe Biden's inaction that he hasn't done more to "combat gun violence" have forced the president's hand. The president is so desperate to generate some kind of excitement that he caved to their demands and during a White House Rose Garden gun control speech announced the creation of a new federal Office of Gun Violence Prevention. It's something one of the president's key voting constituencies has demanded since he first took office.

In addition, several longtime gun control groups - including Everytown of Gun Safety - have garnered key leadership positions in the office.

Today, the president remarked, "I created by executive order, I'm determined to send a clear message about how important this issue is to me and to the country."

Vice President Harris added, unironically, "President Biden and I believe in the Second Amendment but we also know common sense solutions are at hand." She said, "The new Office of Gun Violence Prevention will play a critical role in implementing President Biden's and my efforts to reduce violence to the fullest extent under the law, while also engaging and encouraging Congressional leaders, state and local leaders, and advocates to come together to build upon the meaningful progress that we have made to save lives." <https://www.nssf.org/articles/new-federal-office-gun-violence-prevention/#ixzz8Ei9lGuZN>
Let's Take a Look at Who Will Be Running Biden's New Ministry of Gun Control

The office will have little to do with preventing actual crime and everything to do with using taxpayer dollars to attempt to deny Americans their Second Amendment rights.

The White House Office of Gun Violence Prevention is a section of The White House charged with carrying out President Joe Biden's gun control executive orders. If that sounds problematic, it is. Executive orders are orders from the president that are based on law. That means executive orders direct federal agencies to execute certain functions that are prescribed by laws authorized by Congress and signed into law by the president.

That means this new White House Office of Gun Violence Prevention is a redundant effort to push gun control. Given that the president is pursuing gun control efforts outside the boundaries of federal law, it should be expected that this office will do more of that.

That includes more gun control shenanigans like the ill-fated attack on hunter education. President Biden claimed the Bipartisan Safer Communities Act (BSCA) prohibited the use of federal funds for hunter education and scholastic archery programs in schools under the Elementary and Secondary Education Act (ESEA). Except that's a lie. No such provision exists.

Congress fought back and passed H.R. 5110, the Protecting Hunting Heritage and Education Act, which was supported by NSSF. The White House confirmed the president would sign the bill that passed with only one single vote against it in the U.S. House of Representatives. The Senate approved it by unanimous consent.

But wait, there's more. Expect this new office to make moves like the Biden administration's "zero-tolerance" policy for Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco, Firearms and Explosives (ATF) inspections. That's seen federal firearms licensees (FFL) lose their licenses and livelihoods over minor clerical errors. There's a lawsuit pending over this overzealous policy and a federal judge just denied the ATF's request to dismiss it.

The mission of this new office might best be described as a government-backed gun control wish granting machine. President Biden will leverage this office for universal background checks, which would necessitate a national firearm registry to work...as the Obama Justice Department admitted. If that doesn't sound Orwellian, check with Canada and see what Canadian Prime Minister Justin Trudeau is attempting with that country's national registry. It's actually a confiscation scheme.

There will be more. Gun control politicians already sent a roadmap to The White House earlier this year. In that wish list letter, they wanted U.S. firearm manufacturers with Defense Department contracts to submit to an agreement not to sell modern sporting rifles (MSRs) to civilians. They also want to further restrict certain firearms exempted under the "sporting purposes" import exemptions.

This gun control agenda is already playing out in President Biden's attempt to rope in nearly anyone who privately sells a firearm as a "firearm dealer," requiring them to obtain a license and maintain firearm transfer records in perpetuity. This isn't, however, what the Bipartisan Safer Communities Act text reads when the definition was clarified.

The White House Office of Gun Violence Prevention will be headed up by none other than Vice President Kamala Harris.

This new office can be added to the list of other tasks with which the vice president has been charged and has achieved so much. Those areas include voting rights, the U.S. southern border, abortion, artificial intelligence, water policy, promoting child tax credits, COVID-19 vaccine education, heading the National Space Council, expanding nationwide broadband access, union labor expansion and stopping online harassment.

Stefanie Feldman will serve as the Director of the newly created office. She's a longtime aide to President Biden, serving as a Domestic Policy Advisor, where many of the Biden administration's wild gun control schemes originated. Her social media accounts are peppered with gun control chest-thumping, including one post on X, formerly known as Twitter, from 2019 that reads, "As president, he'll defeat them again. And, he'll repeal the non-sensical liability protection for gun manufacturers."

It seems to have escaped her notice that doing so would require an act of Congress.

Greg Jackson will join Feldman, as Special Assistant to the President and Deputy Director. Jackson's qualifications are more than 10 years as a gun control advocate for a number of organizations, including George Soros-backed Tides Foundation Community Justice Action Fund, and Director of Community Relations for Mayor Muriel Bowser of crime-ridden Washington, D.C. He was also the victim of a criminal shooting in 2013.

Jackson also brings to the office an active animus against law enforcement. Washington Free Beacon reported Jackson participated in a January 2021 University of Maryland policing seminar when he lamented that he is "struggling to survive while ... police budgets thrive." He was also part of an Obama Foundation webinar entitled "Re-Imagining Policing," when he proposed "community-led violence intervention and prevention strategies" in place of traditional law enforcement. The goal, Jackson said, is to "ultimately reduce the need for policing." How's that going, Mr. Jackson? Jackson's noticeably absent on criminals illegally using firearms to prey on communities but blames the firearm industry for politicians' unwillingness to hold criminals to account.

Robert Wilcox will also serve as Special Assistant to the President and Deputy Director. His role prior to the appointment was as Senior Director of Federal Government Affairs at Everytown for Gun Safety.

That's right, he's a gun control lobbyist. Of course, this is the same gun control group that's bankrolled by gun control billionaire Michael Bloomberg. As Everytown's lobbyist, Wilcox called for bans on entire classes of firearms and supports bankrupting the firearm industry through frivolous and unconstitutional lawsuits. He's testified for increased gun control but never for holding criminals accountable for their horrific crimes.

It's not just Wilcox. Vice President Harris hasn't called for increased prosecution of criminals, even though The White House is playing up her former role as California's attorney general and as a prosecutor. Feldman doesn't want to lock up criminals and neither does Jackson.

Vice President Harris is much more focused on providing White House access to George Soros' grandson Alex, who was appointed to head up the progressive policy group Open Society Foundation. Vice President Harris regularly meets with the young Soros. This is the same Open Society Foundation that raised the idea of somehow making cities devoid of any lawful firearm possession...even by police.

The new White House Office of Gun Violence Prevention is anything but dedicated to preventing the criminal misuse of firearms. Instead, it's a haven of gun control ideologues that are now getting paid by taxpayers to press an unconstitutional agenda.
