Okay, presto-change-o, the Democrats dumped Biden for Harris. And Harris has selected a “mid-west farm boy, hunter, retired National Guard, combat veteran, and middle of the road governor” for her running mate. So what does this mean for us, Second Amendment supporters? Well for starters, we should be just as concerned when Biden was leading the ticket. Harris has been a hard core anti-Second Amendment zealot all of her political life. She wants mandatory government gun buy-backs, confiscation of “assault guns,” mandatory background checks for all gun sales, and “red-flag” laws.

Governor Walz is an exact clone of every anti-Second Amendment proposal. Owning two guns and hunting means nothing to me when I’ve heard the anti-gun statements that he proclaims loudly. And by the way, Walz IS NOT a combat veteran.

The Harris-Walz team is the most socialist ticket in our country’s history. Look at what they have said and done in their respective careers. If they are elected, our freedom and liberty is in great peril. If they also have a majority in Congress, there will be a direct assault on the Second Amendment. Every socialist government in world history has disarmed their citizens. A Harris-Walz administration will be no different.

What about the three Supreme Court decisions that have ruled that having a weapon is indeed guaranteed by the Second Amendment and that a citizen can carry a weapon in public? If the Democrats have both houses of Congress and the White House, they are going to expand the Supreme Court and nominate enough leftist judges until they have a majority, and then they will simply reverse the prior rulings of the court and will legislate the Second Amendment away to nothing. Then the confiscation begins.

How do we stop this? VOTE. The Harris-Walz ticket must be defeated. We need to vote for the candidates for the Senate and the House that support our Constitution, our freedom and liberty, and the Second Amendment. And by voting, I mean you, your voting age family, and your friends. We have to do better than the primary election that was held 1 August. In Roane County there was only a 21% voter turn-out. Vote like your life depends on it – IT DOES!

Harris-Walz: Gun Politics Will Trip Them Up
Ammoland Inc. Posted on August 9, 2024 by Dave Workman

The choice of Minnesota Gov. Tim Walz as running mate for Vice President Kamala Harris may seem like a coupling made in heaven within the establishment media, but it could bring out the gun voters in numbers not seen since Democrats lost Congress back in 1994.

If not, then gun owners who are now burning up bandwidth just might be hot air. Then, again, they may have plenty about which to fume after the Democrats convene in Chicago later this month.

Harris is already trying to backtrack—i.e. change her tune—on the “mandatory buyback” she proposed while on the campaign trail back in October 2019, as detailed in the Austin American-Statesman by Amy Sherman at PolitiFact.com.

In an effort to explain Harris’ softening, Sherman takes a whack at Donald Trump’s assertion that Harris would take people’s guns. She writes, “The phrase ‘gun confiscation’ is broad and could lead voters to think that Harris wants to confiscate all guns from law-abiding owners. That’s not what she has said.”

True: She said, “mandatory buyback.” That translates to “compensated confiscation.” It amounts to the same thing, and American gun owners know it.

Here’s what Harris said: “We have to have a buyback program, and I support a mandatory gun buyback program. It’s got to be smart, we got to do it the right way. But there are 5 million (assault weapons) at least, some estimate as many as 10 million, and we’re going to have to have smart public policy that’s about taking those off the streets, but doing it the right way.”

There is no “right way” to confiscate privately held firearms, even with financial compensation.

Walz, meanwhile, has drifted from “darling” of the National Rifle Association—as noted by Forbes—to an “F”-rated politician. His swing to being a gun control advocate is described by Forbes, as favoring “gun control reforms.” Minnesota gun owners are not too keen on these “reforms,” and one can comfortably predict residents of the North Star State will make that abundantly clear on social media over the next few months. The election is less than 90 days away.

Walz—described in a headline by News Nation as a “reform champion”—argues that “basic gun safety isn’t a threat to my rights.” Pushing to ban an entire class of firearms may not be a threat to Walz’ rights, but many of his constituents see it is a threat to their rights.

MSNBC is trying to portray Walz as “the gun lobby’s worst nightmare.” It might be the other way around on Nov. 5, when Walz’ support for restrictive gun laws brings “gun voters” out of their traditional lethargy to prevent him from becoming the next vice president.

The New York Times recalls how Walz was once mentioned in Guns & Ammo as one of the Top 20 politicians for gun owners. That was a short-lived romance, it appears, despite his being a “rare gun-owning Democrat who spoke of his love for hunting.”

Perhaps the problem Democrats, and their media cheerleaders, have is their failure to “get it” that the Second Amendment is not about hunting. It is, as spelled out, about the “security of a free state.”

When she accepted the vice presidential slot from Joe Biden, Harris took ownership of the Delaware Democrat’s expansive gun control agenda. It has been scrubbed from the Internet, but thanks to Vox, the details are still available. It included “universal background checks” and a ban on “assault weapons.”

Back in 2019, when he was on the campaign trail, CNN noted how Biden vowed to push for a gun ban if elected, and he has done exactly that, unsuccessfully. He, or one of his PR people, even authored an OpEd in the New York Times in August 2019. He wrote, “We have a huge problem with guns. Assault weapons — military-style firearms designed to fire rapidly — are a threat to our national security, and we should treat them as such. Anyone who pretends there’s nothing we can do is lying — and holding that view should be disqualifying for anyone seeking to lead our country.”

Harris has never strayed from Biden’s gun ban effort. What was Joe’s is now Kamala’s and, by association, Tim’s.

On the subject of Second Amendment rights, a Harris presidency would be no different than the Biden presidency, although the effort might be more streamlined since Democrats have learned from their past failures. Walz might even become the administration’s front man on gun control.

Ask someone in Minnesota how that might work out.

History Shows Harris Does NOT Believe in the Right to Bear Arms

Ammoland Inc. Posted on July 29, 2024 by John Crump

Now that Kamala Harris is the presumed Democrat nominee for President without receiving a single vote in the Democratic primary, we must review her record on the Second Amendment to see if she believes in an individual’s right to bear arms.

The woman who is running to ‘save democracy’ after being installed as the Democrat candidate for President after a coup against her boss, President Joe Biden, has a verifiable history of being openly hostile to the Second Amendment. Vice President Harris went as far as claiming that the Second Amendment only applies to the Military and does not extend to the people. Although it is almost certain that many mainstream media sites will claim this to be false, it is easy to verify through an amicus brief that Harris filed in the Heller Supreme Court Case.

We know this will happen because, during the last election cycle, the Agence France-Presse (AFP), a French government-funded news agency and “trusted” Facebook partner, marked the claim as false on Facebook. Due to an investigation launched by AmmoLand News into French election interference, Facebook was forced to remove the false fact check. Although the social media giant was forced to backtrack, it did ban this reporter’s personal account for life without the possibility of appeal.

These actions led to an investigation by the Federal Election Committee (FEC) for marking factual statements as false to protect their chosen candidate from criticism, but shortly after Biden was in office, the FEC dropped the investigation into the social media company Facebook and the foreign-funded media organization, AFP. We are already seeing similar things play out in the media, such as claims that Kamala Harris raised bail money for Palestinian protesters being marked as false even though she did just that through her official X (formerly Twitter) account.

We know what the response will be, so the best way to counter those claims is to show irrefutable proof of Harris’s views on the Second Amendment by using legal documents filed with the Supreme Court to prove Harris does not believe in an individual right to bear arms. Keep in mind that during the last election, the AFP would mark the amicus brief posted to Facebook without any context directly from the Supreme Court’s website as “false.”

On January 11, 2008, Harris signed an amicus brief defending the District of Columbia in the Heller case. The case confirmed that the right to bear arms was an individual right. Harris and her cohorts unsuccessfully tried to argue that the Second Amendment only applies to the military. If Harris were successful, the entire landscape of gun rights would be drastically different. States would be able to ban any and all firearms for civilian use, effectively destroying Second Amendment protections.

“For nearly seventy years, courts have consistently sustained criminal firearms laws against Second Amendment challenges by holding that, inter alia, (i) the Second Amendment provides only a militia-related right to bear arms, (ii) the Second Amendment does not apply to legislation passed by state or local governments, and (iii) the restrictions bear a reasonable relationship to protecting public safety and thus do not violate a personal constitutional right,” the brief reads. “The lower court’s decision, however, creates a broad private right to possess any firearm that is a “lineal descendant” of a founding era weapon and that is in ‘common use’ with a ‘military application’ today.”

You read that right. In the eyes of Harris, you do not have the right to bear arms. She believes only the military has that right, putting her at odds with over 200 years of American history. She not only obfuscated what the Second Amendment says but ignored the writings of our Founding Fathers, such as the author of the Second Amendment, James Madison.

“Besides the advantage of being armed, which the Americans possess over the people of almost every other nation.... Notwithstanding the military establishments in the several kingdoms of Europe, which are carried as far as the public resources will bear, the governments are afraid to trust the people with arms,” James Madison wrote in the Federalist in 1788.

The brief also defends the banning of handguns in the name of “public safety.” As we know, thanks to Bruen, “public safety” cannot be used as an excuse to strip a person of their natural rights. This brief isn’t something that Harris just signed her name to. She helped pen the brief. These are her extremist anti-gun ideas that show she would be the most anti-gun President in the history of the United States if she gets elected to the White House.

“States and local governments have continued to modify criminal gun laws, tailoring them to meet the specific needs of each jurisdiction,” the brief reads. “For example, many states have enacted enhanced criminal charges and penalties for felony crimes if the perpetrator possesses a firearm during the commission of those crimes. In addition, a number of states and local governments have determined that, to protect public safety, certain exceptionally dangerous firearms, including assault weapons, assault pistols, and/or handguns, should be banned altogether. Some states have enacted an outright ban on carrying concealed weapons.”

Right now, we have a firewall against draconian gun laws with SCOTUS, but Harris has pushed the idea of expanding the Supreme Court by adding liberal extremist Justices to the bench to remove that defense. A Harris presidency might be the end of the Second Amendment as we know it. A phrase often repeated during elections is “This is the most important election of our lifetime,” but that might be a reality this time as far as our rights are concerned. Many gun owners are not Trump fans, and many are not one to vote for the “lesser of two evils,” but this time, firearms owners might have to hold their noses and vote against Harris if they genuinely care about gun rights.

Despite Assassination Attempt, Trump Stands Firm on 2nd Amendment as Harris & Walz Want Confiscation

Ammoland Inc. Posted on August 9, 2024 by Tred Law

In a recent press conference, former President Donald Trump made it abundantly clear that his commitment to the Second Amendment remains unwavering, even in the face of a personal assassination attempt that came fractions of an inch from ending his life and left him shot and bleeding from his head.

The weapon used by the now-dead would-be assassin was an AR-15, the most popular and most owned rifle in America, a rifle that has become a symbol in the debate over gun rights in America. Yet, despite the incident, Trump firmly stood his ground on our right to keep and bear arms.

His declaration underscores a critical divide in the upcoming presidential race. On one side, we have Trump, who has stood by the rights of Americans to bear arms, believing that “people need guns for protection.” On the other, we have Kamala Harris, a candidate who has spent much of her career attempting to curtail these rights and who now faces the impossible task of distancing herself from her own record.

The contrast between Trump and the Harris-Walz ticket could not be starker.

Trump’s steadfast defense of the Second Amendment, even after being shot by an AR-15, speaks volumes about his commitment to the rights of law-abiding Americans. Meanwhile, Harris and Walz are attempting to mask their pasts, hoping voters will not notice their inconsistencies and their willingness to sacrifice constitutional rights for political gain.

As we approach Election Day, gun voters must remember where the candidates stand—not just where they say they stand today but where they have stood throughout their careers. Harris and Walz have shown they are willing to change their positions when it suits them and their masters, but Trump’s resolve remains firm.

For those who value the Second Amendment, the choice is clear.

Tred Law is your everyday patriot with a deep love for this country and a no-compromise approach to the Second Amendment. He does not write articles for Ammoland every week, but when he does write, it is usually about liberals attacking his right to keep and bear arms.
